

For Immediate Release

Spinapse Releases New Casual Game: Suspects and Clues

Moraga, CA. May 22, 2008 -- Spinapse announced the release of Suspects and Clues, a game filled with visual puzzles that challenge your powers of observation. Instead of the illustrated look so common in casual games, Suspects and Clues immerses you in a photorealistic world of famous paintings and images from around the globe. With your eyes as your guide, you track down suspects and uncover a story of mystery and revenge.

Thieves, vandals, and counterfeiters from around the world have joined together for the heist of the century. As the newest member of Inviztigators, Inc., you need to mark the evidence for signs of the crime, identify suspected criminals, and piece together clues left at several international locations. Each task involves a different type of puzzle, requiring differing skills of perception to solve the challenge.

"Casual games have started to incorporate elements of 'spot the differences' puzzles," says John Taylor, President of Spinapse. "But with Suspects and Clues, we wanted to boost the challenge level, add subtle humor, and include other puzzles that play to your visual senses. Along with a good storyline, we think it ties together well."

Before release, Spinapse offered a "sneak peek" of Suspects and Clues on a prominent download site. The game scored high in popularity, landing in the top five for puzzle games and the top fifteen for all games.

Price and Availability

Suspects and Clues is available for download at www.spinapse.com.

Trial version: Free

Unlimited play: $14.95

Available for Windows 98/NT/2000/ME/XP/Vista and Macintosh 10.2 or higher

About Spinapse

Spinapse makes games for your brain. The company was founded in 2004 by Bill Purdy and John Taylor, two veterans of the software industry. Both are alumni of the Harvard Graduate School of Education and have created award-winning products for organizations such as Lucas Learning, the Library of Congress, shockwave.com, and Apple Computer.

Suspects and Clues

<http://www.spinapse.com/products/suspectsandclues.php>

Contact

John Taylor

Spinapse

(925) 377-5544

###

Evaluation copy available on request.

Spinapse press room:

<http://www.spinapse.com/press/>